Mandatory recycling is coming to town

by Lindy Magner

By early March, recycling will be mandatory in the city for most residents, if council adopts the ordinance which it first reviewed at its Tuesday night meeting.

The council is scheduled to consider the ordinance again at its Feb. 2 meeting.

If passed, single-family residents will be the first to be required to recycle, with apartment complexes, office buildings larger than 20,000 square feet, and all restaurants and taverns required to recycle effective July 1, 1994. The recycling of industrial materials such as asphalt will begin Oct. 1, 1993, with yard-waste recycling required by Jan. 1, 1994.

According to City Manager Jack Shelver, the county is convincing cities to adopt mandatory recycling ordinances by threatening surcharges for cities which do not adopt such ordinances.

"They will be setting aside an area at the landfill and picking out the trucks coming from cities without recycling ordinances; if they find recyclable materials in the trucks, they will add a surcharge which will be passed on to the city where the trash originated," said Shelver.

The countywide mandatory recycling ordinance adopted in June 1991, went into effect in regional phases, with North County cities targeted first for compliance, with South County and East County cities following respectively, according to Jeff Lindenthal, county recycling coordinator.

He noted that surcharges at county landfills begin at $25 per truck and progress up to $100 per truck for cities which continue to not comply with adopting mandatory recycling ordinances.

According to Lindenthal, Lemon Grove was originally included in the South County phase because the city's contracted disposal company, EDCO Disposal, was dumping at the Otay landfill.

"The city contacted us, and we said if their trash company dumped at an East County landfill, then they would be included in the East County phase instead. They worked out an agreement with EDCO to have their waste taken to the Sycamore landfill, so we put them in the phase they requested," Lindenthal said.

East County cities were asked to have a single-family residential recycling ordinance in place by last September, said Lindenthal.

According to Shelver, city staff felt no immediate need to comply.

According to Lindenthal, no enforcement for East County cities was planned until the voluntary compliance period ended, Dec. 1, 1992.

Since Dec. 1, Lemon Grove has been subject to surcharges, though none have yet been levied through the random checking of trash trucks, said Lindenthal. He noted that 15 cities in the county have adopted recycling ordinances at this time.

"We felt that there would be greater participation in recycling programs if recycling was mandatory and at their doorstep," he said, explaining that the purpose of the county recycling push is to divert as much material from area landfills as possible.

As a result of the recycling efforts, there has been a 30 percent drop in waste disposed at area landfills in the last two years, he said.

Lemon Grove has had a voluntary recycling program for about 1 1/2 years, but that program has been less than successful, according to city officials.

For residents, the materials which must not be included in their trash include newspapers, plastic beverage bottles, aluminum, tin and bimetal cans, white goods (appliances), glass bottles and jars.

Disposal company crews will be responsible for checking trash along routes and notifying residents not complying with the ordinance that they must recycle certain materials.

In keeping with the ordinance, the trash hauler will notify the city when a third violation occurs; a fourth violation will result reporting the matter to a city code enforcement official for "punitive action" not yet determined.

When the ordinance is adopted, a city education program to inform the public on the new recycling requirements will also go into effect.

As to the number of office buildings which will be effected by the commercial recycling ordinance which will apply to those over 20,000 square feet, Shelver isn't sure, though he believes it will only be a few.

"City Hall is 22,000 square feet so it will come under the ordinance; we're already recycling all of our paper," he noted.

Edward Ellison, left, a solo dancer with the San Francisco Ballet Co., was a guest instructor last Saturday at the Lemon Grove Arts Complex. Due to a calf injury, Ellison is taking some time off, and decided to visit the San Diego area, where he lived for a short time.

City finalizing agreement with Baker

Bob Baker Enterprises and the city's redevelopment agency are now finalizing an agreement which will locate a Bob Baker Toyota dealership in the 6800 block of Federal Blvd, with the help of city redevelopment funds.

After about five months of negotiations between Baker and city staff, a deal has been worked out in which the redevelopment agency provides Baker with $150,000 in financial assistance for acquisition of the former Lee White Toyota site. Lee White filed for bankruptcy more than a year ago.

Also, through a 5-year sales tax-sharing arrangement, Baker would receive additional assistance for constructing a new facility on the site, which could reach $300,000 or more.

At Tuesday night's meeting, the council directed the city attorney to prepare a final agreement, and set Feb. 16 as the date for a public hearing and subsequent approval or disapproval of the deal.

The construction of a new, two-level dealership is expected to be completed in about a year.

Other car dealerships which the city has offered financial assistance include Lee White Toyota and Corral Ford.

The impetus for assisting car dealerships is to insure that these large sales-tax generators either locate or stay within the city, according to City Manager Jack Shelver.

"There's just too much at stake not to do it," he said.

Baker was originally considering either locating here or in the College Grove area.

Community support urged for alcohol ordinance

by Karen Zastinsky, Executive Director
Lemon Grove Prevention Project

The Lemon Grove Planning Commission has drafted a new public policy which aims to maintain both a good quality of life in the community and the city's strong business base. The proposed policy embodies the public health model of alcohol problem prevention, which recognizes that individuals, especially children, make decisions about drinking in response to pressures and cues in their social, economic, family and community environments.

The proposed "conditional use permit" (CUP) process would enable the city to have local control over the alcohol environment in Lemon Grove. The measure establishes guidelines for the mode and manner of alcohol sales. Residents of South Central Los Angeles and South East San Diego are realizing, in hindsight, the necessity of such alcohol policy to reduce their problems. Lemon Grove officials, on the other hand, are creating an appropriate alcohol policy so that this city doesn't become a dumping ground for business practices that adjacent communities don't want. Without planning, problems associated with alcohol such as loitering, vandalism, drinking and driving, underage drinking, traumatic injury and violence, will continue to grow.

As state and federal government resources diminish, there is a virtual abdication of regulatory and law enforcement duties by agencies such as the California Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control. It is therefore incumbent upon local authorities to regulate and monitor the retail availability of alcoholic beverages at the community level.

The proposed strategy, which uses local zoning and land-use powers, is a major public health and safety resource for Lemon Grove. It will help to set a standard of good business practice, which is pro-community and pro-business. The CUP process supports existing businesses by preventing new outlets from moving in next door. In this way, it controls competition. It also supports responsible businesses by establishing a fair and consistent set of rules for every licensed seller or server of alcohol.

The Lemon Grove Prevention Project, the local alcohol policy advisory committee, is very supportive of the proposed policy, and believes the CUP process is an important step in reducing alcohol-related problems. The public is invited to participate in the Planning Commission's public hearing process, to be held Monday, Jan. 25, at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Center, 3146 School Lane.

Businesswomen offered success sessions over breakfast

The U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) and the National Association of Women Business Owners is sponsoring a series of informative, educational breakfasts for women who have been in business for one year or more.

The first breakfast will feature internationally renowned speaker, author and entrepreneur Jeannette Reddish Scollard, who will discuss "Goal-Setting for 1993-Getting it Right the First Time."

Each month, a female professional will address the group and discuss a specific issue of importance and concern to San Diego's woman-owned businesses. Future topics will include personnel issues and how to really get a loan for your business.

The meetings will be held from 7:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. the fourth Friday of each month at Willy's American Bistro, 911 Camino del Rio South, in Mission Valley.

The fee is $12 in advance, or $17 at the door. For more information please contact Delores Braswell. 557-7250 ext: 1147.

Long-term care ombudsman training to begin

On Feb. 3, training for long-term care ombudsman volunteers will begin at the Area Agency on Aging headquarters in Kearny Mesa.

The free, 6-week training "Ombudsmanship-Long Term Care" is sponsored by the San Diego Community College District/College of the Emeriti and covers the new California state ombudsman curriculum. Classes meet every Wednesday and Friday afternoon from noon to 3 p.m. until March 17.

Training topics include aspects of aging, medical and pharmacology problems, regulations governing long-term care facilities, conservatorships, complaint investigation, communication skills and resources for the elderly.

After completing the class and a personal interview, ombudsman volunteers are certified by the California Department of Aging. Volunteers then act as resident advocates for skilled nursing facilities and senior residential facilities to which they are assigned.

The volunteers make regular visits, attend resident and family council meetings, respond to complaints and concerns from residents, family members and staff and witness Durable Powers of Attorney for Health Care.

There are currently 85 active ombudsman volunteers in San Diego County.

For more information, contact Jean Stein at 560-2507. You may register at the first class session.

Hazardous waste collection planned Jan. 30 at Helix High

The city of La Mesa, in conjunction with the county of San Diego Department of Health Services, will sponsor its next Household Hazardous Waste Collection Event on Saturday, Jan. 30, at Helix High School. The collection site, which will operate from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. will be located in the student parking lot at the intersection of Lowell Street and Normal Avenue.

Area citizens are encouraged to bring unused portions of household hazardous materials for recycling or proper disposal. Household hazardous waste includes: used motor oil, paint, solvents, varnish, drain opener, oven cleaner, and any other products labeled Caution, Warning, Danger or Poison.

When transporting household hazardous materials, all products should be left in their original containers and should not be mixed together. Also, all containers should be thoroughly checked to ensure that they are sealed and will not leak. The containers should be transported in the trunk of a vehicle, away from passengers, and in amounts that total less than 5 gallons or 50 pounds at one time.

Citizens can either bring leftover products to the La Mesa collection event or contact the Household Hazardous Materials Hotline at 338-2267 for other disposal options. It's not only unsafe, but also illegal, to toss these products in the trash or pour them down the drain.

B-Words Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

A loss of a pal

This past week, Lemon Grove lost one of the real old-timers.

Al White passed away following some radical surgery which apparently triggered a massive heart attack. Al was a regular at the morning caucus coffee time at the Lemon Grove Pastry shop. A staunch Republican, Al never did quite get over the Clinton election, but I do not believe that we can really blame it for his death at the age of 84.

Our sympathy and prayers go out to Evelyn in this painful time, and we want her to know that the entire crowd is available if there is anything that we can do to help. We all are missing "Big Al" and will feel that loss from now on.

Al retired from the Navy as a chief aviationist about 40 years ago after a full career of pushing aircraft around the flight decks of our aircraft carriers. He was so good at it that they gave him pretty much short shift in the shore duty assignments. Following WWII, he worked for a time at North Island Air Station. Our first encounter with Al was when we came to Lemon Grove in 1955 and he sold us our first house.

He was associated with Charlie Hesser, another retired Navy man, and also found us what later became the Lemon Grove Veterinary Hospital. Al had quite an extensive career in Real Estate in Lemon Grove and was one of the fairest and most ethical performers in that field. He also worked with Jim Pearce and worked solo after Charlie Hesser retired.

Al was a joy to talk with about the old days in Lemon Grove. He was a wealth of knowledge regarding the goings on of the Sonka Brothers, George Casteel and the Zilkens. He was involved in the incorporation efforts, and has always been supportive of our city since it finally succeeded.

He knew many of the politicians of the early days. Dave Byrd, our past supervisor, Charlie and John Dail, Judge Luther Hussey, and V. J. Dorman were the powers during those times.

The Lemon Grove Pastry shop caucus is honoring Al with an empty chair at the table, and coffee cups are lifted in salute to one of our valued members who has gone before us. His spirit is with us and that presence is keeping the Democrat versus Republican conflict in balance on an on-going basis. Whenever Doc, or another pro-Clinton advocate becomes too verbose, he will be seen to look quickly over his shoulder. Big Al just might be there to "Bush" whack him.

Rest in Peace, Al, and like the song says, "when you get there before we do, make a little hole and let us through." We are all richer for having known you, and thank you for your company and counsel ... from the gang at the pastry shop.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

The steady, never-ending rains, that have engulfed us, produced in me a growing listlessness and loss of energy. Increasingly house-bound, I found myself curiously unaroused by the distant pounding of hammers, as many of my neighbors were building their arks. I imagined the rain would stop sometime or other, but I've ceased speculating when and just plodded through each day, trying to work up interest in the happenings of the rest of the world.

The inauguration of a new president, especially when it represents a change in the party in office, is one of America's finest hours. There are only a handful of nations on earth capable of a peaceful transition of this kind, and for us it is an awesome reaffirmation of our constitutional process.

This said, however, it is slightly unnerving to find that the major thrust of the national press appears to be sartorial in nature. What Hillary will wear and the identity of her designer has filled the news in recent weeks, while the presidential style (or lack of same) has been equally dissected. The prez-elect has been solemnly advised to go to looser fitting suits and more classic neckwear and at the same time to do away with his thigh-revealing running shorts and those baseball caps. Even poor Chelsea has been hideously caricatured and advised to, perhaps, dress a little less frumpily.

As Clinton faces his inauguration speech, he is being reminded constantly of the great inaugural speeches of recent history - Roosevelt's, "We have nothing to fear, but fear itself," and Kennedy's, "Ask not what your country can do for you, etc." Of course, he will fall short of those; almost every chief executive does. But, even if he strikes some memorable phrase, its instant dissection, by the ready-to-pounce press, will leave it rolling in the dust.

Rain and other things

The new president, of course, will find his earliest days in office to be no picnic. Before dealing with the deficit and health care, he literally has a world of other problems to occupy his efforts. At this writing, Saddam Hussein appears to have all but re-declared war on "the great Satan;" Bosnia is screaming for aid; Somalia has, as predicted, proved more difficult than expected; Angola looms on the horizon as problematic and, to cap it all off, Hawaii is kicking up dust. On the hundredth anniversary of the American take-over of the islands, nationalistic fever is sweeping our 50th state with some even seeking total sovereignty. Apparently, it isn't bad enough that we have to deal with Moldavia, Tadjikistan, Uzbekistan and the like, we may soon have to cope with a newly independent Hawaii!

But all of this isn't going to mean a thing, if we continue to be deluged with rain. The "40 days and 40 nights" of Genesis hasn't yet quite come to pass, but, by my reckoning, we're at least halfway there. If it keeps up, our arks may start seeking landing spots on top of Mt. Helix. So far, I've only located two dogs and two cats for the ride, but, I guess, I've still got more time. Stay tuned and keep dry!

Getting off the lecture circuit

by Joseph Walker

My great-great-grandfather Henson experienced some incredible things during his life. He hunted buffalo. He was a bodyguard for a presidential candidate. He was a scout for a pioneer company. He was the first mayor of a small western town that he helped settle.

The one thing he didn't do much was talk - or write - especially, not about himself. While our family knows the basics of his story, we don't know a lot about how he felt about things. For example, we know he lived through a frightening period on the western frontier when survival depended upon the crops that had been planted. Trouble was, a horde of grasshoppers kept eating the crops before they could ripen. Things were looking pretty bleak for the entire community until a huge flock of sea gulls came along to eat the grasshoppers.

Folks called it a miracle. They wrote about it, sang about it and created works of art memorializing it, but not grandfather Henson. As far as we know, his only reaction to the episode was a brief journal entry: "Pests gon. Wont et no mor guls."

That's it. No elaboration or expression of gratitude, just the facts, plain and simple.

Sometimes, I'm sure my children wish I was more like grandfather Henson. At least they wish I could be like the woman who survived the ill-fated Donner expedition. Having finally arrived in California and recovered from the trauma the party encountered while snow-bound in the Sierra Nevadas, she invited her family to join her in California.

"But don't take no cut-offs," she warned, "and hurry right along."

My children could handle that kind of counsel - quick and to the point. Instead, they've got a father who seems to think that if you spare a word, you'll spoil the child.

Like last week, when my 13-year-old son, Joe, was an hour late coming home from a church activity, and, of course, something needed to be said to him. So I said it. And then, I said it again. And I kept right on saying it until it was difficult to know which had consumed the most time, his tardiness or my tirade. We covered a lot of territory during that lecture, from trust to self-control to the impact of high interest rates on a sluggish economy.

You don't see the connection? I guess you had to be there. The frustrating thing about all of this was none of it seemed to be getting through to Joe. It was as if he wasn't even listening. So I pressed on, searching for the right combination of words that would trigger within him a spark of responsible recognition. Heck, at that point I would have settled for a little subtle fear.

My wife, Anita, sat silently through all of this, until I finally came up for air. "Look, Joe," she said, "here's the deal. We expect you to be home on time.

When you can't be home on time, we expect you to, at least, call us and let us know what's going on. If you don't, you'll lose the privilege of going next time. Understood?"

"Yes, Mom," Joe said anxiously. "I understand."

There it was - in Joe's eyes! Recognition! Responsibility! And, yes, even a little subtle fear! And in 50 words or less!

"How did you do that?" I asked Anita after Joe had gone to bed.

"I just listened," she said.

"To me?"

"No, to Joe."

That was a little confusing. "But I was doing all of the talking," I said.

"I know," she replied. "But he was sending out messages - his eyes, his hands, the way he was standing. This wasn't a defiant teenager. This was a kid who made a bad choice. He just needed to know that it would be best if he made a better choice next time."

I was stunned. "But what about all of the stuff I talked about - you know, trust, self-control, obedience, the economy, for Pete's sake!"

"Oh, that was good," she said. "Perfect."

I almost blushed. "Do you really think so?" I asked.

"Sure. You were able to get all of that frustration out of your system, and it gave me time to focus on Joe so I could figure out what he needed to hear."

So that's it for me. I'm off the lecture circuit. From now on I'm going to follow Anita's example. I'm going to talk with my kids, not at them. We're going to communicate - back and forth, not just from me to them. My children will think it's a miracle.

Or, as grandfather Henson would have said: "Ego gon. Wont et no mor crow."

From Where I Sit

A kick in the nose

by Frank Andrews

I'm not an avid sports fan, but due to a very serious bet (all you can eat Chinese) with one of my good friends, Lea, I had to watch the game Sunday. I bet that the Chargers would not make the Super Bowl this season. I haven't checked with my bettor from Santee to confirm our Chinese dinner date.

As long as I have lived in the San Diego area, I have not seen the locals so hepped up over a football game. It was good to see fans that support their team like they did. San Diego is not the most supportive group compared to fans in other cities. I guess we are spoiled with all the interesting things to do and see in our area with the "most perfect climate," and many are free, compared to the stadium prices. We have tried soccer, basketball, and hockey a couple of times. Baseball and football seem to hang on, even without much support.

Scanning through some of my past stories, I ran across the one about my swimming partner, Aonia Davis. At the time that Aonia and I were attending the Arthro-swim program at the Grossmont Hospital therapeutic pool, which was several years ago, the Chargers played the Dolphins at Jack Murphy Stadium.

It seems that this nice lady happened to be standing in the tunnel directly behind the goal posts, talking to her husband about the business at hand. Aonia was doing her thing as "ram rod" for the Arthritis Foundation Balloon Drive, which was going on at the stadium during the Chargers-Dolphins game.

Like a magnet's pull, the well-kicked football, after another thrilling touchdown by the Dolphins, sought Aonia down in the tunnel and smashed her right in the "old schnozzola." The damage to her nose was serious enough to require applying ice packs. She later had x-rays taken, but, thank God, it wasn't broken - although she wore racoon-style eyes for a while. Even in her discomfort, Aonia blurted out, "Boy, those Florida boys are sure some sore losers."

Aonia Davis worked real hard and long for a worthy cause and should be commended for her efforts; at least, more than a "kick in the nose."

Tunneling under the city

by Bob Burns

If anyone had ever told me that my duties as a councilman would take me underground, I would certainly have called the guys in the white coats for them. But, I guess the adage, "never say never" is a truthful axiom because that is just where I found myself recently. Accompanied by our city staff, and Councilman Lake, I was privileged to be given a tour of the Water District's pipeline tunnel under San Miguel St. We descended a steel ladder to some 60 feet below street level and sloshed our way to a small flatbed rail car that held just the five of us. We traveled a distance of 2,120 feet through a tube of horizontal timbers supported by steel ribs over 4 feet. We followed a red laser beam along the tunnel, were dripped on constantly by ground water, and shouted over the din of a huge fan that carried air into the shaft.

There is a steel grate near New Jersey St. and a plate near the terminus of the then progress at about Corona St. These are access points along the way. It takes about 8 minutes for the machine to drill forward for 4 feet, for the timbers to be placed and the steel ribs to be bolted together. This is the optimum, when all is working well. The dirt is carried back on a conveyor belt and dumped into large metal hoppers on the track which are pulled back out when full. Then they are hoisted with the crane to be dumped into trucks for disposal - hopefully at the Little League field.

When the tunnel is complete, the pipe will be pulled and pushed through and welded, section by section. After testing, the pipe will be surrounded with cement. The present shoring structures will be left in place so that it should last indefinitely. If I ever had thoughts of the dangers of a break in the line, it was surely dispelled upon seeing the inside of the structure.

I believe that it is a blessing that the decision was made to tunnel San Miguel after seeing the total disruption of Massachusetts north of the freeway, in La Mesa. With the street improvements that are promised, it will be much better for all concerned. I have been assaulted with many questions, and "what ifs" by the residents about this pipeline, and up to now have been uneasy about what is supposed to happen. Now, I can say that these are very professional men who know what they are doing, and we have nothing to fear. Some 60 feet under the city it is another world. We were below storm drains, sewers, and gas lines. We were in country where we were more likely to encounter a mastodon skull, or a brontosaurus sternum than anything else. The Trolley never missed a beat, and Frenchy Faucher never was denied access to his property for one minute. This is truly amazing work and the experience was worth my muddy shoes, my spattered trousers, and my missing lunch. Next time, however, I will wear my hunting boots, and a rain slicker - that is if we are invited to go again.

If anyone has any questions about the tunnel, feel free to ask Jack Shelver, Craig Lake, Les Ruh, Doug Yount or myself.

Friends of the Lemon Grove Library Newsletter

DONATE BOOKS NOW - BUY BOOKS LATER

Next Friends' book sale is scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 27, at the library. Please bring your boxed or bagged books, marked "For Friends of the Library," to the Lemon Grove Library, 8073 Broadway, Lemon Grove. The donated books will be displayed for sale on Feb. 27, priced at 25 cents and 50 cents for most books, higher-priced for a few special items.

There is someone, somewhere, who is looking for just the book that you have completed and no longer wish to keep. Please share with us, and hand on your surplus books. Paperbacks are ever popular, as are cookbooks, dictionaries, travel, children's stories, Westerns, astrology, medical, biographies, history, health and science; we need them all. If you are unable to take donated books to the library yourself, please call Mary at 460-5340; someone will come by to pick them up.

RENEWING MEMBERS AND NEW MEMBERS LOOK FOR YOUR NAME ON ROSTER

Thanks to all who have dropped off their membership forms and dues at the library. Memberships in the Friends of the Lemon Grove Library are for a calendar year and are $7 for individuals, $10 for a family, $15 for a business. There are membership forms at the library, but just a note from you, left at the desk, is sufficient to include you in this worthy group. We hope to include a roster of members' names in the next newsletter; please, let's make it complete.

NO TAX FORMS AT THE LIBRARY TRY THE LEMON GROVE POST OFFICE

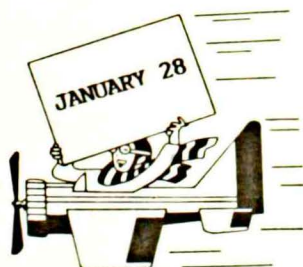

The library will not stock tax forms for public distribution as it did some years ago. Postmaster Dennis Dorman says that the Lemon Grove Post Office now has the 12 most commonly used tax forms displayed and ready for pick-up by the public. The forms go quickly, he says, and will probably be gone by early March. There won't be a second supply; when these forms are gone, would-be tax-filers will have to look elsewhere.

NEXT MEETING OF THE FRIENDS OF THE LEMON GROVE LIBRARY

The Friends will meet at 9 a.m.; Thursday, Jan. 28, in the Community Room of the Lemon Grove Library. Visitors are welcome. As the meeting takes place before library opening hours, just knock at the double glass doors at 9 a.m. and you will be admitted for the meeting.

A NEW YEAR MESSAGE FROM THE PREZ

In 1993, Friends of the Library will dedicate 100 percent of its energy to maintain and upgrade the Lemon Grove Library.

Perhaps you know that the Friends of the Library sponsor the library's summer reading program for children. Last year the cost of this program was approximately $700, so the time has come to plan for this most worthwhile activity.

Our next book sale is scheduled for Feb. 27, 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Books will be for sale in front of the library, 8073 Broadway, Lemon Grove. In case of rain, the sale will be moved to the community room inside the library.

It takes a lot of 25 cent and 50 cent book sales to reach our goal, so plan to come early and purchase lots of books. After Feb. 1, we also accept donations of books from your personal library.

As members of the Lemon Grove community, we can all contribute to the success of our library in 1993.

Won't you be a member?

Single Membership $7

Family Membership 10

Business Membership 15

Happy new year to all, and I hope to see you at the book sale on Feb. 27.

QUICK REVIEWS OF RECENT BOOKS

Reviewers are Mary Vinson, Dwight Putnam

"Court of Honor" by William P. Wood

Supposedly, this is to the judiciary system as Wambaugh was/is to the law enforcement sector. In my opinion, it falls way short. It appears to have been written not only in spurts, but in a rush. Too much is left dangling in a manner for you, the reader, to figure out. I don't really read to sit and think and help the author along. It is not a poor book but I guess I would class it as a weak attempt to tackle what could be a deep, perplexing situation. I assess it a grade of 8 of a possible 10. DP

"The Choice" by Barry Reed

Be very patient with a slower than slow beginning and taking an interminably long time to warm up. You definitely will be pleased with your well-placed patience.

When this lawsuit gets into gear, it is nothing but "all ahead full." Attorneys, a batch, get to wheeling and dealing as story and trial unfold. If any of you readers can shut this during the last 50 pages, he'll be a "better man than me." Way high in the 9 area on my Putnam scale of 10 points. DP

"Meridian 144" by Meg Files

The heroine is 50 feet below the surface of the Pacific when disaster occurs; everything turns bright yellow, the water shudders, broken fan coral, sand, rocks, tires, swirl about. She survives, but emerges from the water when her oxygen is exhausted to find that most of the trappings of civilization on the small island of Tano have been destroyed and that most animals and human beings are now corpses, decomposing in the tropical heat.

Through a series of flashbacks, intermittent throughout this tale of survival, we learn of the relationships that shaped this woman, the maturing of a daughter both loving and resenting her mother.

Parts are reminiscent of Nevil Shute's "On the Beach;" it is compelling both as an adventure story and as an introspective study of the forces at work within family and other relationships, creating a person who feels inadequate and "not quite real." Powerful, thoughtful, engrossing; I hated to put it down. A 10. MV

"Kiss" by Ed McBain

This is the 43rd novel of Ed McBain's series about the police of the 87th Precinct; the first story appeared in 1956, and he has averaged one per year.

These are books with complex, interwoven plots, following cops, suspects and victims, and they have the nitty-gritty feel of reality. "Kiss" features Lt. Steve Carella, still mourning his father's death as he attends the trial of the man who murdered him. At the same time, his caseload includes that of a wealthy young woman who has had two attempts made on her life.

A bodyguard hired by her husband plays a key role and the police solve the mystery in a surprise ending. 8.0 MV
